IMPORTANT RESOURCES
As the end of summer draws near, and Autumn begins to creep in, the month of September offers excellent opportunities to help wildlife prepare for the coming winter. Providing habitat this time of year can be as easy as letting the gardens go, leaving the leaves and dried stems standing and full of high calorie content seeds. Birds enjoy the perfect perch and food source while bees, butterflies and other pollinators depend on the debris.

September is good to:
- Leave your gardens messy.
- Harvest seeds for next year.
- Tackle those invasive plants.

RECOMMENDED ARTICLES:
1. Greenspaces in Small Places
2. The Value of Wildlife to Cities
3. Pollinator Garden Plants and Practices